LETTER FROM THE PRESIDENT AND CHAIRMAN

We are pleased to present to you the 2015-2016 LSU Health Foundation New Orleans Annual Report.

Together, our donors invested $13 million in cash gifts, pledges and planned gifts during the 2015-2016 fiscal year – a banner year! We hope that as you read the stories within these pages that you are able to understand the impact your generosity has had on our ability to realize and expand our work.

Our mission is simple: to support LSU Health New Orleans’ fourfold mission of patient care, education, research and community outreach, summed up succinctly in four words: Discover. Teach. Heal. Serve.

Your support and generosity make this possible. You have directly improved the lives of our students, professors, patients and families. Thank you for all that you do for the LSU Health Foundation and LSU Health New Orleans.

Gratefully,

Chad Leingang, CPA
President & CEO

James J. Leonard, MD
Chairman of the Board
Our faculty are teaching the next generation of health care providers. More than 1,000 faculty currently teach about 3,000 students in the schools that make up LSU Health New Orleans: Allied Health Professions, Dentistry, Graduate Studies, Medicine, Nursing and Public Health. LSU Health New Orleans offers more than 40 degree and certificate programs ranging from associate through doctoral and postdoctoral. Many of our faculty hold or have held top leadership positions in national and international professional societies.

Our School of Nursing is the only nursing school in Louisiana within an academic health sciences center. The School of Dentistry is the only dental school in the nation offering degrees in Dentistry, Dental Hygiene, and Dental Laboratory Technology.

LSU health care professionals have been practicing the art of healing for more than 85 years. Patients from all over the world choose LSU health care in order to reap the benefits of academic medicine – the best health care linked to the most current research from the brightest minds.

Offering a broad range of health care specialties in hospitals and clinics throughout the state, it is easy to see why our health care professionals are the first choice for nearly 1 million patient visits each year.

For generations, our faculty, staff and students have been committed to serving the communities we live and work in. LSU Health New Orleans is known for its outreach activities, from opening the first clinic of its kind in the nation specifically for musicians to increasing scientific achievements of school children and providing education and early cancer detection services statewide.

LSU Health’s outreach programs, educational opportunities, research and health care services reach into every corner of the state, bringing the full resources of Louisiana’s health care leader to the people it serves.

Research drives all advances in care, treatment and prevention. LSU Health New Orleans has hundreds of different initiatives that are being led by some of the best researchers in the world. A gift to the LSU Health Foundation helps to support these efforts. These two stories show a snapshot of the important work happening in our backyard.
DONORS POOL RESOURCES TO FIND A CURE

This year alone, more than 1.6 million Americans will learn they have cancer and almost 600,000 will lose their lives to the disease, numbers so high it is nearly impossible to find someone untouched by cancer.

Legendary entrepreneur and restauranteur Al Copeland received his devastating diagnosis of Merkel Cell Carcinoma, a rare and very deadly neuroendocrine cancer, in 2007. On his deathbed, he asked his children to help find a cure for cancer, and the Al Copeland Foundation (ACF) was born.

The Cancer Crusaders share Al’s vision: an end to cancer-related deaths. The Crusaders are an all-volunteer group that raises funds throughout the year and then shares all 100% of the proceeds between the LSU Health Stanley S. Scott Cancer Center and Tulane’s Cancer Center – an astounding $1.6 million to the SSSCC since 1996.

These two groups came together to create the Al Copeland/Cancer Crusaders Endowed Chair in Neuroendocrine Cancer. Endowed chairs provide a permanent funding source to recruit the best and brightest to the University. Because this endowed chair is a Board of Regents matched chair, ACF and Cancer Crusader gifts of $600,000 have been matched with a public investment of $400,000, creating a $1 million endowment – a tremendous return on investment for any investor and a powerful recruiting tool.

Dr. Augusto Ochoa was recruited from the National Cancer Institute where he led the Immunotherapy Laboratory and was appointed to the chair in 2011. He quickly began building the Cancer Center’s immunology program. Scientists are only beginning to understand how to apply immunotherapy to cancer treatment and patient care. It uses the patient’s own immune system to attack cancer cells more effectively and with far less toxicity. Doctors are hopeful this approach might be useful against Merkel Cell Carcinoma (MCC) and other cancers, especially since this cancer now appears to be linked to a viral infection.

“Dr. Augusto Ochoa is a preeminent scientist whose contributions include discovering signature changes in the immune system that indicate cancer has blocked the body’s protective immune response allowing it to grow and spread.”

-Steve Nelson, MD, Dean of LSU Health School of Medicine

DONOR SPOTLIGHT

Dr. Augusto Ochoa, Director of the LSU Health Stanley S. Scott Cancer Center, takes a time out to join Al Copeland, Jr. as he prepares food for the Annual Fried Chicken Festival, which benefits the Cancer Center’s immunotherapy program.

Dr. Ochoa was one of 28 scientific experts, cancer leaders and patient advocates from around the country appointed to the Moonshot Task Force, which was created to help guide the scientific direction of ending cancer as we know it. Vice President Joe Biden, who lost his beloved son Beau to cancer in 2015, is in charge of this new national effort which seeks to double the rate of progress toward a cure - to make a decade of advances in cancer prevention, diagnosis, treatment and care in five years.
The Cancer Crusaders are an all-volunteer group that raises funds throughout the year resulting in gifts of $1.6 million since 1996.
Dr. Patricia Molina and her team, Dr. Liz Simon, Dr. Nicholas Gilpin, and Dr. Robert Siggins work together to find solutions to alcohol and drug addiction.
PREVENTING ABUSE & TREATING ADDICTION, IN LOUISIANA AND BEYOND

Alcohol and drug abuse take a tremendous toll on our society at many levels, and Louisiana is no exception, ranking among the highest in the nation for consumption and abuse of alcohol and drugs.

Approximately 10% of Louisiana residents have a diagnosable alcohol use disorder and 5% use illicit drugs. Outdated estimates from 1998 place the economic cost of alcoholism in Louisiana at $3 billion annually and the cost of illicit drug addiction at $193 billion per year nationally.

The LSU Health Alcohol and Drug Abuse Center of Excellence (ADACE) is working on a number of fronts to combat issues related to addiction and abuse. The mission of the ADACE is to enhance the research capabilities of scientists, stimulate collaborative research efforts, and strengthen educational activities related to the biomedical aspects of alcohol and substance abuse.

ADACE researchers are studying the link between alcohol and stress, the intersection of pain and alcohol, and the behavioral effects of alcohol. A number of ADACE scientists are researching the biomedical consequences of alcohol abuse and HIV/AIDS. HIV/AIDS patients often abuse alcohol, which can worsen HIV/AIDS clinical outcomes. Researchers are examining the consequences of alcohol consumption on the progression of HIV/AIDS and associated opportunistic infections. These health care concerns are of particular relevance to Louisiana, which ranks high in both alcohol consumption and the number of HIV-infected citizens.

Dr. Patricia Molina, Director of the ADACE, and her staff also host a number of prevention and education programs for the community, including educational activities for all ages and research opportunities for Louisiana teenagers, young adults, and teachers. ADACE hosts programs for physicians, addiction treatment programs and the local judicial system aimed at helping addicts achieve long-term sobriety.

“We recently hosted an event for the public, “What Every Parent, Counselor, Teacher, and Healthcare Provider Should Know about Adolescent Alcohol Abuse,” which brought together national and local educational, medical and scientific experts to discuss the causes and effects of alcohol abuse in adolescents. More than 120 people attended the lectures which focused on alcohol abuse and binge drinking in males versus females; the long-term effects of adolescent alcohol abuse on the brain and body; genetic versus environmental causes of alcohol abuse; and how alcohol affects the brain,” Dr. Molina said. “The feedback we received was outstanding and we plan to continue these types of event in the future.”

“Our projects have a positive economic impact on Louisiana by reducing lost wages, as well as health care and mortality costs associated with alcohol and drug abuse.”

-Patricia Molina, MD, PhD, Director of the ADACE
LSU Health faculty are teaching tomorrow’s health care providers. The future promises new technology, new regulations, and new expectations. Health sciences centers must not only keep pace with new trends but anticipate them in order to ensure tomorrow’s patients receive the best care possible.
REMEMBERING COLIN GOODIER

Dr. Colin Goodier was an LSU School of Medicine alumnus in the third year of his surgery residency when tragedy struck. While cycling and training for his first triathlon, he was killed from injuries he received when a vehicle hit him.

His family, friends and colleagues struggled to comprehend the loss of this bright, compassionate and promising physician, who had already touched so many lives. Motivated by the way he lived his life, his family has worked tirelessly to make sure Colin still has a profound impact on others. His family championed and fought for Louisiana’s first law to protect cyclists. The “Colin Goodier Bicycle Protection Act” mandates that drivers provide at least three feet of space between vehicles and cyclists.

Birthdays after the loss of a loved one are particularly difficult. The Goodiers decided to host a golf tournament as an ode to his favorite sport and one that his brother claims he was “maddeningly” good at on his birthday as a special tribute. The family created the Colin Goodier Memorial Scholarship at the LSU School of Medicine with the proceeds from the tournament, which became an annual event. To date the tournament has raised more than $300,000 for the Colin Goodier Memorial Scholarship, which provides a scholarship to rising senior medical students who are either eligible for or selected to Alpha Omega Alpha, the National Medical Honor Society. Because this scholarship is an endowed fund, Colin’s life will be honored in perpetuity.
Interprofessional Education

LSU Health’s Commitment to Patient-Centered Care

LSU Health New Orleans is the only institution in this region to establish a Center for Interprofessional Education and Collaborative Practice (CIPECP). CIPECP’s mission is to educate future health care practitioners in true team-based care. CIPECP currently works with faculty across all six LSU Health Schools (Medicine, Nursing, Allied Health Professions, Dentistry, Public Health, Graduate Studies) to develop interprofessional education opportunities for health care students. This is a significant accomplishment because traditionally each of the six schools provided health education in silos. The CIPECP has assisted in the development of more than ten interprofessional educational activities for students over the past year as well as secured commitments from all six schools to develop a two-year longitudinal experience focused in team-based care for students beginning September 2017.

According to the Institute of Medicine, “All health professionals should be educated to deliver patient-centered care as members of an interdisciplinary team, emphasizing evidence-based practice, quality improvement approaches, and informatics.”

Advances in science and technology have fostered interprofessionalism, along with the growing understanding that patients benefit from teams with members who mutually respect one another, effectively communicate, collaborate together and coordinate patient care. Many health conditions come from a variety of causes and/or affect several body systems. Patients no longer have “only” a dermatology issue or “just” need a prescription. Health professionals are aware they all must work together to provide the best possible care for a single patient.

Throughout their history in the City of New Orleans, LSU health care providers have served this community with the highest quality patient care in the region, regardless of a patient’s ability to pay.

Dr. Suzanne Fournier, who is fluent in Spanish, is proud of the work at the LSU Health Pediatric Dental Clinic. Her language skills have helped prevent barriers to care.
HEALTHY SMILES, HEALTHY CHILDREN

For a child, the mouth is key for their growth and development, enabling them to eat and drink. The mouth is also a window to their personalities, allowing them to talk with family, teachers, and peers and to reveal their moods through facial expressions.

Dr. Janice Townsend, Chair of the LSU Department of Pediatric Dentistry, is particularly passionate about saving and maintaining children’s oral health.

“Most people don’t realize that dental disease is five times more prevalent in children than asthma,” Townsend said. “In fact, a recent survey published by the state Department of Health and Hospitals revealed that 65% of Louisiana’s third graders had experienced cavities and 41% had untreated dental disease.”

Left untreated, dental decay can lead to infection and pain that can affect how a child speaks, eats (affecting overall growth and development), and their ability to concentrate in school. Unfortunately, lack of dental care is the reality for many children living in Louisiana, and what begins as a seemingly minor oral problem can turn into a visit to the emergency room with long-term health consequences. Uninsured children of the working poor in the New Orleans area face difficult obstacles to obtaining dental care.

The LSU Pediatric Dental Clinic provides children with the highest quality oral care. Dr. Townsend and her colleagues strive to make this care available to every child, regardless of the patient’s ability to pay. She has partnered with foundations such as the Kool Smiles Foundation, American Academy of Pediatric Dentistry Healthy Children Healthy Smiles, the American Dental Association Foundation, and Delta Dental of Pennsylvania to secure funding to provide restorative oral health care and low-cost preventive care to as many children as possible. The Pediatric Dental Clinic is fortunate to have Dr. Suzanne Fournier, the only Spanish-speaking pediatric dentist in Southeast Louisiana, on staff. Dr. Fournier has been invaluable in helping to erase another frequent barrier to care, language differences.

Dr. Townsend and the students and residents in her clinic rely on the support of the generous donors to the LSU Health Foundation on behalf of the Pediatric Dental Clinic to provide top quality patient care to all who need it.

“A healthy smile is the best gift you can give a child! Oral restoration can be very costly, and too many families have to choose between purchasing food or medicine and improving their oral health.

We are grateful to the foundations and other donors who help us bring these children back to a healthy smile.

-Janice Townsend, DDS
Ten years later, doctors found that he was not cured, as his whole family had come to believe. In fact, Mark had what was considered ‘innumerable’ (literally too many to count) tumors, ranging in size from a few inches to as small as a grain of sand.

Mark’s life was clearly on the line. Desperate to find care, Mark’s godmother, a registered nurse and nurse practitioner, reached out to Dr. Eugene Woltering, the world renowned expert in neuroendocrine tumors, at LSU Health New Orleans. Dr. Woltering personally responds to each and every request, and Mark’s godmother’s request was no different. After meeting briefly at a conference in Portland, the Patton family flew from Carlsbad, CA to New Orleans for treatment. After a 16-hour operation to remove 82 individual tumors in his liver alone and more than 20 others throughout his body, Mark came out of surgery forever grateful to Dr. Woltering and his team.

Today, Mark is 37 and married to his wife and “champion,” Elizabeth. Together they have three children. They live in Carlsbad where Mark works in production for Callaway Golf.

“Finding Dr. Woltering saved my life. He is a person who cares. He’s a nurturer,” says Mark. More than ten years later, Mark is still in regular touch with the surgeon who has become a part of his family. Mark still visits New Orleans once a year for his physical with Dr. Woltering, making sure he schedules his appointment so that he can attend a Saints game with members of the neuroendocrine team.

Grateful Patient: Dr. Eugene Woltering and Mark Patton

Mark Patton was only 11-years-old when he was diagnosed with neuroendocrine tumors so advanced that his doctors were forced to remove his right lung.

Just as the color pink has become the signature color for breast cancer awareness, zebra print has become the representative “color” for neuroendocrine cancer.
I would do anything for Dr. Woltering; he changed all of our lives.

-Karen Patton, Mark's mother
From the beginning, community outreach has been a critical component of LSU Health’s mission. LSU Health students, faculty and staff participate in numerous programs and volunteer opportunities throughout the year, contributing to the health of Louisiana’s communities.
A young mother desperate to change her baby’s diaper despite hand paralysis. A former professional ballerina who longed to dance with her husband. A New Orleans jazz saxophonist who was determined to cook his favorite pasta dish again.

These are just three of the stroke survivors that Dr. Barbara Doucet, Assistant Professor at the School of Allied Health Professions Department of Occupational Therapy, has helped to achieve a significant life goal through the creation of a free post-stroke clinic at LSU Health.

Current neuroscience research demonstrates that people living with the effects of stroke can and do continue to recover long after six months. However, insurers typically only provide rehabilitative services for six months after a stroke.

Dr. Doucet was well aware of the research and the fact that there are too many people living with the effects of stroke who are uninsured, underinsured or have run out of insurance options. She needed a partner to make her vision of a free post-stroke clinic a reality.

The Christopher and Dana Reeve Foundation took a special interest in the program, and invested $12,000 into the clinic, which allowed LSU Health to host the free clinic twice a month for 10 months, providing patients living with the effects of stroke with much needed occupational, physical and speech therapy services, provided by our Allied Health Professions students and faculty.

“This clinic is special to me because these patients are able to receive therapy services they need, and our students benefit by learning to provide care to real patients with actual medical conditions. Study after study shows that this is a superior learning experience when compared to the traditional classroom lecture,” said Dr. Doucet.

Her patients are the success stories. The young mom was shown an adaptive process to change her baby’s diaper that included strategies to position her child and to use her affected arm for stabilization. The ballerina was positioned in front of a mirror and instinctively began her natural arm and trunk movements in unison with the classical music that her student therapists brought for her session, while her husband looked on and was visibly moved. The saxophonist was able to incorporate his weak hand into his cooking process by holding the pot, pouring the sauce over the pasta into small bowls, and delivering his delicious creation to his fellow clinic participants for their enjoyment.

The LSU Health Post-Stroke clinic is the consummate example of the significant impact that private support, such as that received from the Reeve Foundation, can have on our students and our community.

Since the clinic opened earlier this year, our students, under faculty supervision, have provided over 200 hours of rehabilitation therapy.
